NUMBER 10

JOCK'S WAGGIN' TONGUE

Vol. 3 Thurs. Mar. 9 1939. No. 6
Jock McIntyre, Editor

Saturday we asked a friend of ours if he had been wearing glasses and he said, no, that the mark on his nose had been caused by drinking grape juice out of a fruit jar.

Don't forget the big McDee, Ford coming to town on this Friday, March 10th at 1 p.m. in the Community Hall. We'll be seeing you.

Pete Patterson is back from a two month visit in Ontario, and reports that he still believes Alas. Canada's best province.

Last week we reported reductions in General B Battery prices. This week we reported new low prices on Eveready and Burgess. We are trying our best to be "Your Hardware Merchant."

How's about a little co-operation? Shorty Bouzard reports that next season he fully expects to build an artificial ice arena in Champion so he can supply all Champions with hockey tickets. Power to you Shorty.

At the hockey game the other night we saw Jim Ashmore with four Champion ladies and Mrs. Comulini with four Champion men. It would hardly do to question names at this time, but let's be a little more specific.

We are very pleased to announce new low prices on Flow, Ray, points and valves. A complete stock of all points at all times on hand.

May we remind you again, of the day—Friday, the date—March 10th, the time—12 p.m., the place—Community Hall, the event—why haven't you heard? It's the McDee, Ford Entertainment. Bring the wife, the sweetheart, the kids, and the whole d— family. There will be fun, and entertainment for them all.

Don't crank your car any longer, it's really not necessary since you can buy a good 12 plate battery for as little as we will ask you for one.

The world of wonders never ceases. We saw Mrs. Pete Patterson, Mrs. Ed Wate, Mrs. E. Griffin all at the hockey game the other night and we believe Fred, Pete and Ed, were all at home. Things are sure all backward these days it seems.

Our sympathies to the Anderson family in their bereavement.

New Assessor Named By Village Council

Auditor Is Re-appointed

At the regular meeting of the Champion council held on Friday evening last, C May of Calgary, was named the assessor for the current year and E. D. Batram was again selected as auditor. Mayor J. D. Henderson presided.

In the appointment of the auditor, council had been in the mood to make a change to satisfy the demands of certain ratepayers, but when it was pointed out that there were several matters in connection with the shortage which had still to be ironed out, it was felt that Mr. Batram was the proper person to carry out the necessary details, so that a further claim could be made on the bond company. It is estimated that a further two hundred dollars could be secured.

Appointment of an outside assessor was made in the favor of because of the change in the school act which will mean that the school assessment will be taken from the municipal assessment and there is liable to be some differences of opinion as to the amount the village ratepayers should pay in relation to the rural residents.

Ulysses S. Alexander was re-appointed as secretary treasurer for the village at the same salary as last year as was Dr. Freer, medical health officer, Councilor Clever brought up the question of having a contract similar to that in force in the rural municipality where every person is given free medical service. While the cost to the council would be greater, the present fee being only $100 per year, the cost to the individual ratepayer would be very little.

It was revealed that there was confusion over the tax consolidation project, the fact being that no actual by-law could be found to cover the transactions. No definite action was taken but it was intimated that those who have kept up their payments will be carried under a new by-law to be enacted while those who have failed to keep their obligations will not be re-assessed and a new application taking by the individual to consolidate.

In as much as the by-laws are not up to date, with present method of transportation and custom, council will spend a full evening revising the by-laws, then the new by-laws will be

Large Entry Expected. Concert In Evening

Plans are advancing for the annual school festival for the Little Bow Municipality which is to be held in Champion on March 31st. The event will be held in the Community Hall. The United Church and Campbell's Hall, the different sections of necessity being carried out throughout the day. Three outstanding judges have been secured, for the Drama, Music and Eloquence contests.

The festival starts at 9 a.m. and is to be concluded with a public concert in the evening at which the selected groups will perform. Certificates of merit will be given to the winners, first second and third places being awarded.

Great interest is being taken in the event by the teachers and pupils, all over the district and there is every reason to believe that keen competition will be a feature. Further details will be given later as to the time and place of the various events but the public are urged to co-operate with the teachers and pupils.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mr. and Mrs. J. Loughrey were host and hostess to a most enjoyable dinner party on Saturday in honor of their daughter, Miss Mabel Laurence, on the occasion of her birthday. Covers were laid for ten, and following the delightful menu guests were indulged in a social evening enjoyed.

It was decided to discontinue the service to the rink as at the date of the meeting. This would not prevent the children enjoying skating in the afternoon and on Saturdays as long as there was ice, but reduce the cost of the lights and caretaker for the evenings. Several matters of a routine nature were dealt with including the passing of the accounts.

WEDDING

MARONDA—DONAGHY

The home of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Donaghy of Lomond was the scene of a pretty wedding on Thursday Feb. 23rd at 3 o'clock, when their only daughter, Mary Wilks became the bride of Mr. Martin Maronda, son of Mr. C. Maronda and the late Mrs. Maronda.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of white tulle and a veil which fell to full length from a halo head dress. She carried a bouquet of red roses.

There were no attendants.

The wedding music was played by Mr. R. Frost and during the signing of the register Mr. J. Matheson sang "For You Alone." After the ceremony a buffet supper was served. Miss Alice Holland poured tea. The wedding cake, flanked by pink tapers, centred the table. The rooms were attractively decorated with pink and white streamers.

Canon Winters of Vulcan, who officiated at the ceremony, proposed the toast "to the bride." On returning from a short wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Maronda will reside in Lomond.

Among those attending from Champion were Mr. and Mrs. Maronda, Mr. and Mrs. Baubler, H. J. Higgins and Mr. and Mrs. Urquhart.

Conservation and Unemployment

Since the advent of the great depression and drought era, now nearing its tenth birthday, citizens of the west have become more conscious of the value of trees and of their importance, value and place in the economic life of the country.

During this decade of trial and tribulation, residents of the prairies have observed that while tree areas have not escaped the ravages of drought, the effects of drought have been somewhat ameliorated in areas plentifully supplied with trees. This is mainly due to the moisture conservation power of trees in their relation to contiguous land, partly due to their ability to prevent or halt erosion and to some extent attributable to the fact that such districts by their very nature lend themselves more readily to agricultural diversification.

As a result of these observations prairie residents have become more conscious than they were in the days prior to 1920 and this aroused interest is reflected in the increased attendance at lectures delivered during the annual migrations of the Dominion government's forestry and tree planting railway cars and in the keen interest which has developed in the work being done under the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act and by other organizations devoted to conservation work in various forms.

The public conscience having thus been aroused to the importance, nay necessity of conservation of moisture, it would appear that the time has arrived when very little would be left to be done to any worthwhile projects which the governments of the country, both federal and provincial, might be prepared to undertake, with the dual objective of conservation of moisture through afforestation and at least a partial solution of the unemployment problem. To the extent to which these two problems could be dealt with under a common project would hearty support be forthcoming for such a scheme or series of undertakings.

In The Right Direction

Just recently it was announced by the P.F.R.A. administration that all the newly created community pastures in Saskatchewan, totalling approximately 600,000 acres are to be created game preserves and that portions of these areas are to be given special training in game conservation as part of a program in which the provincial government, the P.F.R.A. administration and Ducks Unlimited will co-operate.

The idea seems to be an excellent one, but it might well be further extended to include a substantial program of tree planting in those community pastures where conditions lend themselves to such a project, thus widening the moisture conservation sphere of influence to adjoining farm lands and providing work as a substitute for direct relief for many now on the relief rolls.

Such work, however, need not and should not be confined to areas set aside primarily as community pastures and game preserves. It could and should be extended to Dominion and provincial parks and vast areas, some of which might appropriately be developed as playgrounds and tourist resorts affording a great deal of useful and valuable work for many now idle and creating assets which would ultimately ensure more return to the country for the money thus expended. Coupled with the planting of treeless areas could well be the improvement of districts of existing natural growth.

Of Wide Value

Apart altogether from its value to agriculture in the field of moisture conservation an active and well thought out forestry program as exemplified by new plantings and improvement, preservation and care of existing plantations and of natural growth, would have an intrinsic value of great importance in the industrial and economic life of the country.

This was pertinently pointed out in the brief submitted last year to the Howell Commission on Dominion-provincial relations by the Foundation of Ontario Naturalists in support of their contention that the Federal government should take over provincial natural resources or alternatively should aid the provinces in developing and conserving them, in the following words:

"The general prosperity of the Canadian people and Canadian business, no matter in what province, but as sources of taxation and conversely as possible recipients of relief, is of vital concern to the Federal government, is axiomatic.

"How important, therefore, that the Federal government should be concerned that raw materials be available for the construction and building industries, for packages, boxes, barrels, etc., of all kinds for shipping Canadian produce to home and foreign markets, to railways, telephone and telegraph companies for ties, poles and posts and rolling stock, to mines for props and other construction work, to factories for the manufacture of furniture, radior, tools, implements and the hundreds of other things too numerous to mention, for fuel and the many uses on the farm."

And again the same organization pointed out that: "There is the possibility of employing relief recipients on forest improvement work, such as the building of roads, trails, fire lines, brush disposal, improving and creating tourist camp sites and conveniences, etc., there still remains a tremendous amount of such work to be done."

Then why not use some of the millions being spent on relief to do some of the work and give work to those who have none?

An Old Chinese Story

Tells How Peach Blossom Became Watermark Paper

Thirteen hundred years ago, during the Tang Dynasty, a tiny Szechwanese village girl committed suicide because love had passed her by. Behind her, according to the old Chinese story, she left a trail of beautiful poems, written on airy slips of peach blossom paper, and addressed to her many admirers who had been attracted by her famed beauty.

The girl, Hsueh Tao, did not write poems of love, but only of encouragement, urging her admirers to seek greater knowledge or wiser methods of administration. She marked all her poems with a drop of water which spread into the form of a peach blossom. This peach blossom watermark is still carried on one of Shanghai's most popular brands of writing paper—the Hsueh Tao—which is noted for its delicate texture.

Recently, during a visit to the girl's shrine at Wang Chiang Lou, where she drew the water for making paper, the writing paper industry some Chinese girls conceived the idea of writing to their husbands and sweethearts at the same time, on blossoms. Hundreds of the scented and watermark messages were dispatched from Chengtu, on each of which was written a verse of encouragement.

Missed His Boat

But Wagner Tenor Had His Joke With Stage Manager

Scholarship, New York, tells this story of Leo Slezak, famous tenor, who sang Wagnerian roles at the Metropolitan several years ago.

One night Slezak was scheduled to sing the part of Lohengrin in Wagner's opera of that name. Lohengrin's first entrance is in a boat drawn by a swan, and Slezak, was standing backstage ready for the correct cue to hop into the boat. Unfortunately, the stage hand in the wings opposite pulled too soon and the swan floated onto the stage without Lohengrin. Quick as a wink, Slezak turned to the stage manager standing beside him and said, "Hey, conductor, where's the next swan?"

Guests Were Surprised

When Host Introduced Special Lighting As An Experiment

The dinner guests of Samuel G. Hibben, chatting merrily, walked into a Chicago hotel dining room one evening and took their places at the table. As they did so a subtle change occurred in the lighting system, and within a few minutes some guests were violently ill, others were mildly sick and all were very uncomfortable without a pause for the fine food before them.

The reason for this was that the chrysalis of the table had turned a gaudy pink, the steaks a whitish grey, the tall glasses of milk were blood-red, and the salads were a sickly blue. What had been fresh green peas one moment had become black overcast clouds the next, and side dishes of peanuts wearily became crimson.

Instead of the usual electric lights at the Chicago dinner, Mr. Hibben had managed to have the room illuminated by especially designed blue-lamps which cut out all the ordinary color of the spectrum except green and red. Mr. Hibben, an illumination engineer, knew that his guests would thus have their stomachs turned — and his experiment was a success. He told them, after normal lighting had been restored, that it was a demonstration of the effect of light and color, not only on the sense of sight but upon the related senses of taste, touch and smell. Color, he reminded his guests, could and did depress or excite and stimulate a human being no less acutely than it affected the life and growth of a plant.—American Weekly.

Sally Lynn came in with Duncan Van Doren and the Keaton. Dana, she was an unimpaired dress, which did nothing for her dark skin and she managed even in the morning round to look last and lonely. The youth from Detroit had no air of languid intelligence and pallid good-breeding, and Keaton Dana was a solid young man with a heavily placed face. Arline La Mont Dana made her leisurely way toward the guest of honor in a shimmering gleam. Hers was a vehement, insistent beauty, a ripe loveliness overripe, Sally Ann thought acutely, instant in dislike.

"Wonderful to meet you at last," Arline drawled negligently, appraising her from under the heavy white lids of her long eyes. "Imagine—two Big Shots at Danavale in one night! You—and Gunnar Thorwald."

"Gunnar—not the young Norwegian fiend?"

"In person, Jim Allison's bringing him. You must meet him. But he won't take you for a ride. He never flies women."

"I can, perhaps, succeed in bearing it. I've had rather more than my share of the air."

"You must come and see my house."

"I passed it to-day. Do you get in and out with a coupes?"

"I have a zipper down the front," she nodded, indulgent, patronizing. "I'll be seeing you." She made a show progress through the crowded room and Adelaide Dana took her place beside the traveler.

The eyes of both women were on Sarah Lynn and her sister, and they saw Duncan Van Doren take the thin young fellow into a proprietary grasp, and the girl jerk it away. After an instant the youth came to them, smiling.

"Who is that?" Mrs. Edwin Lynn Dana demanded, displeased. "To come here in those clothes?"

"He's merely alighting on earth for an hour, I dare say," Sally Ann supplied. "Gunnar Thorwald, who's just down to the Atlantic. I've seen him on the other side, the Norwegian Ladd, they call him. Europe's most blemish boy of the air."

CHAPTER IV.

"Like to drive around awhile?" Duncan Van Doren wanted to know, closing the door of his glistering roadster on Sarah Lynn and getting into the driver's seat.

"I'd rather drive around until it's time to go home," she said tonelessly. "You know how I loathe the Stewed Prune."

"Promised Arline we'd barge in for a while at least. And it won't be time to go home" until I'm ready to take you." He slid an arm behind her stiffened shoulders. "You mustn't say 'anytime, anytime'! It wouldn't bore you so if you'd enter into things, Sarah Lynn," he complained. "If you'd just take a couple of drinks you'd be surprised at the difference it would make."

"I don't like it!"

"Well, I'm not so crazy about the stuff myself, but I've learned how it goes on a party," he said reasonably.

Arline and her cohorts had made the Stewed Prune deliberately devoid with high-lighted hints and ruffled curtains of dotted Swiss and old-fashioned furniture.

Sarah Lynn and Duncan arrived at eleven. Tables were set close to the walls and the floor covered for dancing, and musicians sent away, throbbing lips and torches through the warm, smoke-laden air.

"Step?" Duncan held out languid arms.

"No, please," the girl shook her head. A hand reached out and pulled her down into a vacant chair.

"Want to visit me, Sarah Lynn?" "Oh, yes, Mary," she answered gladly.

Mary Dana Webster was a comely plump and plump young woman, with twin sons and a baby daughter. Sarah Lynn had never seen her before.

"Think this cocktail will fall on my righteousness?" She caught her cousin's thought. "Neddy has a precious customer up from the South who craves night-life and I'm here to pour them into the car and roll them home. Duncan, you run along and dance with Arline. I'll be here."

Sarah Lynn, Gingers-le? Well, Cousin Sally Ann's a peach, isn't it? You look like her, Sarah Lynn."

Mrs. Webster looked about with keen, amused eyes. She wore no make-up and her heavy day-time color was a little dingy by night. "What a madhouse! And how they talk at night! I feel like a bird."

"What a madhouse! And how they talk at night! I feel like a bird." Duncan Van Doren danced with Arline. "There's something in the air tonight."

"Oh, it's always like this—or sillier," Sarah Lynn sighed.

"No, but Arline and her bunch have been going into huddles and shuffling with glee, and Doc Reddley has just gone zooming into San Jose for something. You know, I think they're framing something on that nice young flier—Gunnar's his name?"

"Gunnar Thorwald," the girl said quickly. "I feel like a bird."

"Well, Jim Allison has him in tow here in the West," Mrs. Webster said, and that means that Arline's had first call on him socially, but I understand he can't see her with a blotcher."

Sarah Lynn lifted one thin shoulder.

"Naturally; but is she poisonous? Her first failure in a big way. You see, she tried to break his rule never to fly women, and didn't even want it, so there'll be reprisals. She claims he's coming here tonight. Can you feature that?"

"It's—Jim Allison's hands," her young cousin defended him.

Duncan Van Doren and Arline danced past their table, swag about their feet, and then he said to her, "Hello, darling!" the hostess greeted Mary Webster. "Nice to see you here. But—why aren't you drinking?"

"Why aren't you eating?" the connection by marriage countered.

Does your Back Ache?

If your back aches and your sleep is disturbed by the pain, you need Dr. Parke's Backache Tablets. Mrs. Ida Parke, 365 E. Franklin Ave., St. Paul, Minn., writes: "I am 46 years old. I have a pain in my back and it is so bad that I can't sleep at night. I have tried many remedies but nothing has helped me. I have heard of Dr. Parke's Backache Tablets and I have bought a box. I have taken a few and I feel much better. I can sleep at night now. I am sure that Dr. Parke's Backache Tablets are the best remedy for backache."

"Lan's dance!" Duncan pulled Sarah Lynn to her feet. They danced slowly with the other slow-moving couples and in silence. As they moved a side door they saw Arline greeting Doc Reddley, a convivial young man with a side-line of medical studies.

"You know me," he boasted. "Dating! In ten minutes—in the office."

Sarah Lynn wanted to return to Mary Webster but her sister steeled her to a large and bold group and smiled when she wouldn't drink.

Arline championed her. "Let her alone! She's going to have her ginger ale or malted milk or clambake tea or anything else she wants. But that doesn't cramp your style. She poured him a lavish highball."

A New Desert Hero

"Ingrams of Arabia" Having Great Success With Tribal Leaders

A figure as romantic as the late Lawrence of Arabia has come to the fore in the desert wilds of the Arabian Peninsula, a man of getting things done in the Hadramaut, they call him, and he's one of those strong, but not too strong, men who do more than increase Britain's prestige abroad than any amount of radio program propaganda.

Still under forty, W. H. Ingrams is bringing peace and prosperity to the Hadramaut, a once-barren area where nothing flourished but murder, tribal feuds and wars.

"Ingrams of Arabia," Colonial Administrator, has altered all that. To-day peace reigns.

Britain's representative called on all tribal leaders and, by using his consummate tact and persuasive powers, he induced them to sign a truce.

Since warfare has ceased to be the chief employment, 100,000 people who fled the country have returned. Now thanks to Ingrams, a police force is being formed to keep order in the Hadramaut.

Engineers are planning to sink artesian wells, and mining experts have shortly to assess the land's mineral wealth.

A medical policy is also being drawn up.

All this has happened within four years and in a speech recently Sir Percy Sykes, veteran administrator and soldier, praised Ingrams' achievement in concluding a truce as "the greatest act of his kind for years, if not for generations."

"Ingrams of Arabia" first visited the Hadramaut in 1934, when he and his wife explored parts of the country never before visited by Europeans.

By wearing the robes of the country and respecting tribal customs, he soon gained the friendship and trust of the Arab chiefs.

He is often called in to settle tribal disputes and his rulings are accepted without question.

Since he returned to the Hadramaut recently, after spending his leave in England, Ingrams has been appointed adviser by several Sultans.

The tall Briton receives every assistance in his work from the quickly "Arabized" and he has the power to call up R.A.F. planes if tribes become restive.—The People, London.

Made To Be Eaten

Snowballs of Shaved Ice Sold On Street in Jamaica

Travelers who like to eat have their snow and eat it too in Jamaica. Although the climate there is as tropical as Africa, snowballs are to be found on sale in the streets of Kingston—snowballs which are intended to be eaten, however, rather than thrown.

They are made of shaved ice and flavored with bright-colored syrups. In Jamaica, where a temperature rarely below 60 degrees makes real snow unknown, frozen substances have a fascination without doubt.

The snowball vendors strive to reflect in the decorations of their wares the distinction of their wares.

Everybody Paid Altske

Law Sets Salaries Of Professional Soccer Players In England

Salaries made by professional soccer players in England are set by law. When a team loses a player makes $400 when the game is a tie, his pay is $450, and when his side wins, it's $500. The greatest player makes $400 when the game is a tie, his pay is $450, and when his side wins, it's $500.

The average playing life of a man is 10 years.

The American outlay for music and voice instruction during 1937 totaled $100,000,000.

Music Is Essential

Because of Important Part It Has in National Life

Which is the more effective, a speech or a song? Which grips a man the more? Which haunts him most? Which may stay in his memory the longer? Our own preference might be, "Give us a song, ladies. Give us a song to cheer."

The directing heads of George Washington University, at the United States capital, may feel the same way about it. A dispatch from Washington reports that mid-term graduates at this university went out into the world the other day with the sweet notes of Gladys Beathout's voice ringing in their ears instead of the customary words of wisdom from a commencement orator.

The dispatch adds: "President Cloyd Marvin explained the university presented the singer rather than a speaker at the exercises because of the important role that music plays in the national life."

There are precedents for song in preference to a speech. Remember, on a battle day,

"Give us a song, the soldiers cried, Then your trances guarding?"

And then, "Each heart recalled a different name."

No demand for a speech on that occasion. The insistence was all on song. Sometimes everyone can join in a song where you can't cut in on a speech that way unless to heckle or look visibly distressed.

A song can give the most moving thing in the world, it can stay with a man down yonder corridors of time, where many a speech can be over to thoughts of homicide, self-destruction or both.—Herald Leader-Post.

THE POLL TAX

DURING the past two issues we have carried an advertisement for the Municipal District of Harmony asking residents to comply with the provisions of the new poll tax and we would like to stress the advantage in all doing their best to conform to the new tax levy.

It is a known fact that the land tax, both municipal and school, is very heavy considering the returns which farmers are receiving from their crops, and that up to the present many have not contributed to the same avenue of the municipality. Poll tax is a means of collecting from all thus equalizing the tax burden.

In the rural district a form of state medicine is in effect which has drawn favourable comment from many other centres. Up until now the cost has been carried by the land owners alone, despite the fact that all have received benefits. The writer carries sickness insurance costing four dollars per quarter whereas the same coverage is given by the municipality free, thus no one should murmur at paying the small levy which covers not only medical but the enumerable services furnished by the local municipality.

Like any other regulation it is almost impossible to enforce if public opinion is not behind it, and we trust that the council will have this backing when it comes to collecting.

POSITIVE AND RIGHT THINKING

There is to-day a very great and pressing need for positive straight-forward thinking. Thinking which recognises the inability of solving present day problems by material means and in a method only without reliance upon a true foundation.

During the past decade there have been innumerable political parties spring up, each with sincere purposes and aims of bettering conditions. Who will say that they have accomplished what they set out to do for their fellow men? Even last week another distinguished Canadian, Hon. W. D. Harcourt, sounded the rally call for a new party while the efforts of our esteemed friend George McLaughlin of The Globe and Mail is certainly awakening interest from coast to coast.

Yet we feel that none of these movements, splendid as they are have struck the true note which the people as a whole are seized with a sense of responsibility. Too often men are elected on a negative platform, that is the people are against the government, not stopping to consider the problems in a sensible manner.

Instead of jumping to conclusions as to what is wrong or worse still joining some kind of issue aimed at a form of state control as is being done in some communities consider our problems, analyzing them as a business man would when his business shows losses.

Only when Canadians will honestly and sincerely strive to see the problems of state, co-operate with the government which happens to be in power, not undermining for party advantage nor pushing sectional demands when larger problems are on the horizon, can any improvement take place. No one political party can do this, only we, as individuals, co-operating with each other to create that feeling of security and good will which will soon reflect itself upon the national life.

Mr. D. H. Russell was called upon and gave an interesting talk on provincial and municipal problems and stressed the need of co-operation.

Mrs. Root, the constituency delegate to the Edmonton convention was guest speaker for the evening. Her talk was most interesting as she gave a very vivid picture of the convention and mentioned some resolutions that had met approval of the delegates. At the close of her talk a discussion was held on the different methods of boning wheat, after which those present voted unanimously in favor of a fixed price, $1.30 per bushel for No. 1 Northern, basis Ft. William up to 1500 bushels per farmer.

This plan was most popular as it did not encourage larger acreage, was cheaper to administer, and a fair share of the bonus would go to the farmer most in need. Before closing, a vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Root. The ladies served lunch.
